A Comedic Stage-Play in Three Acts: George and Jane get settled into their new house on Serendipity Lane just in time to invite his mother and their grown children over to celebrate Thanksgiving. But, when Jane asks each family member to share a serendipitous event from their recent lives, she gets more than she bargained for. Share this hilarious holiday comedy with the most dysfunctional family in the USA, and you'll never view Thanksgiving the same again! The Neil Simon Festival 4th Annual New Play Contest had this to say about the script: "the heightened, argumentative give-and-take that unfurls around the dinner table is the highlight of this piece. . . . A very straightforward and traditional family comedy rooted in the style of Realism. This play deals with a common dramatic set up, that of a family gathering gone awry by the increasingly outrageous revelations of the secrets and lies of its members."
