Gifted Education Communicator/ California Association for the Gifted The Thinking Curriculum and Mental Development Fall 2011 Vol. 42 No. 3 The Gifted Education Communicator is a journal that provides information, tips, and strategies for administrators, teachers, and parents who want to help gifted children reach their full potential. In this issue we're taking a step back and looking at the thinking process that underlies all subject matter and how it can be implemented most appropriately for gifted learners. In our discussions preparing for "The Thinking Curriculum and Mental Development" issue, we focused on the concern held by many educators and parents regarding the downgrading of rigorous thinking in favor of easy-to-assess knowledge that satisfies requirements such as those in No Child Left Behind legislation. In this Issue: FEATURES Not On the Test by John Forster & Tom Chapin Jeopardy Run Amuck The High Cost of Creating Factoid Factories by Dan Nelson Developing Deductive And Inductive Reasoning by Sandra N.
