Ocean Law and Policy (International Environmental Law and Policy) Lorne Kriwoken
The experiences of Canada and Australia provide useful lessons for other states grappling with the need to develop integrated approaches to managing their ocean and coastal resources. Canada and Australia have two of the largest maritime jurisdictions in the world and are extremely conscious of their responsibility and obligations for ocean governance. Both nations are addressing similar oceanic challenges, yet approaching policy development and implementation in different ways. This valuable study traces the implementation of these important global maritime regimes and provides a spectrum of viewpoints on key facets of ocean law and policy developments and constraints in these federal, western middle-power nations. Oceans Law and Policy in the Post-UNCED Era is the result of an ongoing research project by the Australia Canada Ocean Research Network (ACORN). It brings together papers from leading experts in this field, and, in taking a comparative approach, is a major contribution.
