Face the Poem

Face the Poem
A book of poetry by Gianfranco Pagnucci. Sometimes the poet puts himself in a poem as an "I;" and sometimes the poet is simply a voice everywhere and nowhere. It is important to remember that the speaker in a poem is not always the poet and even when it is, may not look much like the poet. But we fan better understand poems if we can figure out who is speaking and what that speaker looks like. In Part I, we have provided some possible faces of the speakers. In Part II you will have fun making your own posasible faces for the speakers. Remember, too, that a speker of a poem might appear a little differentl from different angles. Each of us might capture or emphasize only one of the many possible faces.
