The Last Sunrise Richard Brumer
It’s never too late to discover who you are… A man nearing the end of his days craves one last adventure and purchases the thirty-foot sailboat Noelle from an elderly widow named Jane. As he prepares for his great journey, he discovers aboard the boat a time capsule of Jane’s life with her late husband, from dusty souvenirs to tattered sailing charts marked with the routes taken on their extensive travels. One pristine chart remains, and he knows where he must go… A conversation with Jane reveals his destination—the remote islands of Tonga, the last trip the couple had planned, but never taken. He teaches himself the basics of sailing and sets off with Noelle on a 2500-mile voyage of discovery. He is accompanied only by the ghosts of his past and the challenges of the sea… Wrapped in memories of his late wife Kathryn, he sails on, facing storms and becalmed seas and sleeping under the stars until finally reaching his magical destination. The Last Sunrise follows a man’s challenging love affair with nature on his quest for enlightenment. Humbled by the ocean, alone with his thoughts, he sails toward utter peacefulness—his last passage home.
