Healing Sick Houses: Dowsing for Healthy Homes Ann Procter, Roy Procter
There is increasing evidence that illness can be brought on by electromagnetic stress from electricity transmission lines, microwave ovens or mobile phones. What is less known is that you can get ill from the disruption of energy lines which are part of the earth's own subtle energy field. This is often called geopathic stress. Research conducted in Germany has shown how many cancers occur in homes where negative energy lines have been detected. There is now plenty of evidence that the health of people affected has improved when lines have been corrected. The book describes: - The earth's subtle energy field and how it operates - How energy lines are disrupted and become negative - Cases of how people are affected by disrupted energy lines - The process of adjusting the negative lines - Bridges between physical and the subtle energies - Dowsing as detector and diagnostic tools - The healing process in geopathic terms - Conditions other than geopathic which can cause discomfort or illness - How to make your own house better
